

National Quilting Day!

Coming up on March 21: National Quilting Day! What's a good way to mark it? Well, of course, I'll spend some time in the sewing room but that seems too ordinary I sew all the time. My interests, besides quilting are writing and quilt history, so that would be a good direction. What about writing something every day, like the blogger who did a Julia Childs recipe daily? Too ambitious; I know my procrastinating self will never follow through. So I've settled on something scaled back: a weekly post related to The Quilters Hall of Fame. Please check back to learn some fun facts and see if I can keep this up.
